Despite enormous advances in health care, patients and caregivers alike are dissatisfied with their experience. So much of medicine has been boiled down to rote algorithms and assembly-line care. Seeking inspiration from the gripping narratives of urban medicine to the unlikely poetry of the ICU, this presentation probes the most fundamental aspect of medical care—how caregivers and patients connect.

The Nancy Weaver Emerson Lectureship in Medical Ethics was established in 1997 to honor Nancy Weaver Emerson whose legacy shows us that patients can be our most courageous and extraordinary partners in advancing research, treatment, education and policy.

This lecture is being held in conjunction with the conference below. For more information visit our conference website: bit.ly/HealthcareConf2016

Caring for Patients and Practitioners: Challenges for Emerging Models of Health Care
Thursday, April 7-Friday, April 8, 2016
Trent Semans Center for Health Education • Duke University